100 Ironsworn NPCs

A collection of non-player characters for use with Ironsworn

Introduction

This is a table of 100 NPCs for use with Ironsworn, the fabulous RPG by Tomkin Press available for free at <https://www.ironswornrpg.com/>.

I've found that coming up with interesting NPCs during my Ironsworn playthroughs is not easy. Some players/referees have an easier time but things often grind to a halt as I try to come up with an interesting character.

This is a guide. You may, of course, modify the characters as you wish. Helping the characters or forming a bond may get them to reveal information about the surroundings or your objective. I have decided to exclude that information as it would become repetitious. Some of the NPCs might present you with a task; I find that the tasks should be troublesome unless you deem otherwise.

There are some assumptions about the Ironsworn world. Some characters, for example, believe that the Selde are still a threat. You may change this information to better suit your world or universe.

Some entries in the main section may need you to refer to further entries, such as ##a. These are in Appendix A. Those with a b suffix are in Appendix B.

Thanks to Shawn Tomkin for creating an excellent product. I have enjoyed my adventures in the Ironsworn world.

Regards,
Chaos Drake Press

Chapter 1

1 - Abram is a scarred warrior with a sealskin cloak and battered armour who carries a broken sword. He declares that the sword will bring both power and ruin and offers it to you. You can defeat him in a duel (he fights with a shortsword) or persuade him why you should have it. He knows much about the Veiled Mountains and the Tempest Hills. Should you restore the sword, read 1a.

2 - Saskia, a starving pilgrim, asks you for food. (-1 supply). Even though he is not a native, he will give you information about the journey ahead. (Add +1 to the roll for your next Undertake a Journey) He may accompany you on the journey if he believes you are headed in the same direction. He has come a long way for this pilgrimage, seeking to dismiss a curse that plagues his family line of having knobby feet.

3 - Kalina, a woman hunter in squirrel pelts hushes you and says that there are squirrels around. If you aid her in her hunt she will be grateful and might provide useful information. She speaks of Firstborn being on the road ahead and will advise you on how to avoid them. She has a fondness for sucking her thumb, believing it brings her wisdom and luck.

3 - Kiroff is a former warrior who turned to rearing cattle. Now aged, he has retrieved his old sword and is looking for one last battle, hoping to die in a fight. He will join you if you are fighting anyone or challenge you to a duel. If you defeat him he grants you his sword and his two cows, including the temperamental Batsa. His hand shakes and he is a troublesome foe, relying on his skills to gain an edge.

4 - Zura, a middle-aged man bearing a warhammer, claims that he is the former leader of a settlement nearby. He asks that you aid him in taking it back and promises gifts and aid. He has a crown made from oak that looks well-worn. However, if you approach the settlement, you learn the following at 4a.

5 - Kataka, a woman with a long beard, asks you to help her get rid of her facial hair. She claims to be cursed. She is handy with a sling and can spend hours finding the perfect stone for it. She carries these stones in a leather pouch that smells like gutted seal.

6 - Setara, a wounded hunter who has stepped into a bear trap, calls for help. If you want to move around him, it will require a Shadow roll (weak hit or strong). If you are heard and avoid help him, he will curse you and all your kin. If you free him, read 6a.

7- Lago the Pudgy claims to be a giant. He tries to extort food or a weapon from you. He is fond of stories and riddles, even if he is not good at answering them. He is fond of patting his stomach and is easily distracted by talks of food. He wields a club covered with obsidian shards.

8- Temir and Kendi are young warriors carrying the banner of an unknown clan. The symbol on the flag appears to be a red crow. They seek to place it on a hill Kendi has seen in a dream. They will try to attach themselves to you and accompany you. Temir follows

Kendi because he has no idea what he wants, while Kendi believes in his dreams. The two are quite naive but fight well together.

9 - Jhun wears a broken bear mask and hides behind trees. He is addicted to mushrooms and has forgotten his vow. He believes he is part bear and acts accordingly, though he is not aggressive. He claims there are many fleas on his back and welcomes anyone scratching him.

10 - Revna, an old herbalist with a hound named Kel, approaches you and offers to integrate your deeds into her stories. She may also heal you for a price. Her hound does not fight and is only good for finding herbs and mushrooms. When you return this way your name and deeds may be known to some of the settlements near here.

11 - Torik is a fisherman and he is carrying a fish as large as he is. He asks you for help in carrying it to his settlement or ask you to purchase it from him. He is knowledgeable about fishing and is adept at using his bare hands at catching them. You may grant your character a bonus to fishing in rivers if you spend time with him.

12 - Lili, a maiden with a soft voice and a faraway look, asks you to bring her to a nearby lake. If she does not reach there by the next morning she claims she will turn into salt. If you do and bring her to a lake by the next morning, read 12a.

13 - Dungar is a dwarf carrying a large rock. He is bringing it back to his clan and his goal in life is to bring back the best, most impressive rocks. He might carry some information that may aid your quest, particularly if it requires delving or involves stone. He sings songs about dwarves heroes and ancient treasures.

14 - Arakhi is an elf. You spot him climbing a tree, trying to reach the top. He claims that he has to reach the top of the tree and collect the new leaves to impress those in his tribe. He may provide information about traversing the forest and what to avoid. He dreams of climbing the World tree or the First tree. If you attempt to follow him, read 14a.

15 - Yuda is digging up something from the ground. He claims that it is the urn with his father/mother's ashes. He misses speaking with them. Assisting him might provide information about a nearby settlement. He knows about certain circles built by Firstborn that may aid rituals. He is a farmhand who does not own any land.

16 - Cerya is running away from a marriage, either due to cold feet or because she loves someone else from another settlement. You can either help her escape or capture her and turn her over to her community. She has a bone dagger but is not skilled with it. She is an expert of horses and mules.

17 - Kind-eyes approaches you and asks you to give him a task to accomplish. The task must not involve the taking of a human life or break a law. It is his penance for breaking his vow to protect his family or his community, or he believes he has insulted the gods. He will do his best to fulfil the task as long as it does not take longer than three days. At the end of the task, he will ask if you are satisfied. If you reply you are he will be released from his vow. If you are not, he leaves to find someone else to work for.

18 - Jhan, an iron priest, approaches you and asks you to tell him of your tasks and mission. If he finds you worthy he gives a piece of iron from an iron pillar he guards. The iron is not enough to make a weapon with. He is difficult to follow, though not impossible. He will defend the pillar with his life. He hates cats and talk of them.

19 - Skunda is building a dolomite. He asks you what you think of the work he has done so far. If you find it bad he is likely to ask you for aid to build it in exchange for aid or information or some rabbit he had captured earlier. (+1 supply)

20 - Tio is a runaway groom still wearing what passes as wedding attire. The bride's family is hunting him down aggressively and turning him over will improve your bond with the settlement. Tio has thin limbs and is skilful with a spear. He is quite handsome and knows some carpentry.

21 - You encounter Eleri, a woman wearing a spider mask. If you have a spider she is immediately friendly towards you. Whether you do or not have an arachnid, she will accompany you for the next part of your journey or aid you on your next task. If not, she may help heal you using her spider webs.
If she is slain, read 21a.

22 - An albino mammoth is heading towards you! You may avoid it with Edge or even attempt to wrestle it with Iron, though you will need to deduct -2 from the latter and Face Danger if you miss. You suffer 2 harm from being trampled. The mammoth's keepers are immediately behind it, trying to calm the beast down. Killing the beast will gain the ire of the community, the Splintered Tusk tribe, while wrestling it or otherwise subduing it will gain you the community's respect. The chief of the tribe is named Skarin, and believes the mammoth will give the tribe an edge in combat and survival.

23 - You come across a raven with a message tied around its leg. It could either say 1) we have been found out 2) We are starving 3) Find me in the grove on a moonless night 4) Raise the swords 5) The dark ones approach 6) Ghis knows.

24 - Arasen is using a chisel to extract minerals from some rocks. She has a bag full of rare stones and gems, though most are just stones with some markings. She dislikes iron, believing it to be the root of troubles for too many.

25 - Two grizzled individuals, Alini and Shardan, are arguing. If they spy on you they ask you what you think a settlement requires. If you impress them with your answer or knowledge, they clap each other on the back and march off to the next debate. They will give you berries for your aid. (+1 supply)

26 - Three individuals, Uko, Syndar, Telwin, are playing a dice game. They are guards from a nearby settlement who are bored with their duties. They carry freshly made spears and bone daggers.
If you threaten to report them, read 26a.

27 - Talan is carrying his father (Zhalan) or mother (Mira) on his back. He claims to be bringing them out to see flowers or to enjoy nature but you suspect he is planning to leave them in the wilderness. He is a goat herder who is not very good at his job.

28 - Dogteeth is a feral child/man/geriatric who rushes past you in the woods. He lets out a bark before looking at you warily. Following him might lead to some place which will aid you if you need to resupply (+1 to dice rolls). He can be recaptured and returned to the settlement, though it is likely that his return is not welcome.

29 - Katjia is throwing daggers at a tree trunk. She challenges you to a knife or throwing duel and may teach you a thing or two about throwing weapons. She is unlikely to join you for anything more than a meal. She enjoys throwing her weapons at birds to startle them. Otherwise, she washes the clothes for others in her settlement.

30 - Tarys seeks your aid. A whale is beached nearby, or if you are inland, there is a wounded bear. He believes that the creature carries the spirit of an old God within it and it is his mission to save it. He does not have much to reward you other than some salted meat. A whale requires quite an effort to bring back to the sea while the wounded bear is wary of letting anyone near it.

31 - Bran is a warrior with tattoos covering every part of his body. He says he is going to die within the year and asks that you give him something valuable to possess his skin, which you can claim and remove when he dies. The tattoos relate the story of his tribe and may contain a clue to a vow.

32 - A man is climbing a tree and seems to be collecting nuts and eggs. He calls himself the Squirrel. Due to his climbing escapades, he is familiar with the surrounding territory and is curious about new people that he meets. He might have food to trade with you as well. For a price, he will claim to bring a message to the gods. Should you agree, -1 supply and read 32a.

33 - Narusta wears a horse head skull and dresses in beast furs. She prevents you from going forward. She claims that you are entering an enchanted grove where mystical plants are growing. She is knowledgeable about rituals and if you spend at least three days with her, you may spend one less XP to learn a new ritual.

34 - Ardun is a jolly fellow with a nervous tic relieving himself next to a tree. He claims that his pee helps the growth of plants. He doesn't mind a friendly bout, though his fighting style is down and dirty; just like his hands. You'll carry the memory of the stench for weeks.

35 - Two armed men, Ulf and Odgee, are leading a woman, Estrid, on horseback. They are bringing her to a nearby settlement to be married. One of the guards might secretly be in love with the would-be bride. He, or the bride, might try to ask you for aid in aiding her to freedom.

36 - You come across Troels, who looks exactly like a relative of yours, alive or dead. They deny any connection with them. They may take advantage or be disturbed by the resemblance if you bring it up with them. When you leave, they utter a phrase that your relative used. He is collecting firewood or foraging.

37 - Mankyi cowers from sunlight. He claims to be an undead creature and when night comes he will stalk and kill you. However, he seems powerless right now despite his threats. He is troublesome and you will either need to teach him a lesson or lose him if you do not want him to follow you.

38 - Dalben is carrying what looks like a large egg. He claims that it is the egg of a dragon and he has sworn to protect it. If you meet him again, the egg has cracked and he is accompanied by a wyvern-like creature or refuses to speak about it because he has failed his vow. He is a competent combatant and a veteran of numerous raids.

39 - You encounter Zarvak, a well-armed soldier, and Torik, who does not look at you. Zarvak says he is leading Torik back to his village for reprehensible crimes. Torik will claim innocence but knows he cannot outrun Zarvak. The crime, Torik says, was that he carved graffiti into a supposedly sacred rock that his settlement wastes sacrifices of barley and wheat to.

39 (alt) - Zarvak is a pilgrim trying to find a site that no one in this area seems to know about. He is quite lost. His wife Tila and his two children follow him but cannot wait to head back. He has some dyed cloths to trade but little else. He believes his god will protect him from danger.

40 - Stagyas is a middle-aged woman gathering spiderwebs and mushrooms. She seems to know much about you and your past. If you provide something valuable to you or voluntarily suffer 2 harm, she will grant you a gift that you can use to change your fortune; a circle of brown string that you can break to reroll one die during a test (but not a progress move).

41 - Jahan is a farmer with a secret vow. He wishes to tell a joke to a troll residing in a cave and make it laugh. The cave is nearby where you meet him. If you follow him, roll a d6 and on 1-2, read 41a. On 3-4 read 41a. On 5-6 read 41b. Otherwise, he is the village idiot whose pranks have earned him the ire of his settlement.

42 - You encounter Adda, a weaver, who is methodically carving runes into a rock or a tree. She does not acknowledge you. Disturbing her causes her to hiss at you. She is a master of weaving and quilts. If you speak to her after the completion of her ritual she is more friendly.

43 - Naila, Keera and Zhan are constructing a well. Naila, however, is not doing much work and supervising. She hopes that you will aid them, and your work will be looked on favourably upon by the Gods. Keera and Zhan are not very smart, but they have sworn a vow to build the well. They have caught some eels which they willing to share for aid.

44 - Kanydi, a middle-aged herder, is recruiting men for a war he foresees is coming. He believes that a nearby settlement will attack his village, Highcairn, in three days. He has goat cheese to trade and pay, and information about an iron pillar or secret burial site.

45 - Sadia, a pock-marked shepherd, has lost some of the sheep in her flock. She enlists your help in finding the three sheep, including the ill-tempered Three-horn. She fears punishment from her grandfather, Olin, who she says has a terrible temper and will beat her with his heavy shoe.

46 - Shaiyah, a teenager who is still finding his role, is constructing a small house for fairies. He is mocked by his settlement. He is troublesome and will run from a fight, calling upon fairies for protection. He has a small knife and keeps claiming to see little creatures around him.

47 - Beryl is a former slave who has escaped. Her hands bear marks of being restrained and her back has deep scar marks. She asks for weapons or food. She is distrustful of you, and winning her trust will be formidable. Her slaver, Garush, is looking for her, regarding her escape as an affront to his dignity and reputation.

48 - Garush is a slaver who is hunting for his escaped slave, Beryl. He is respectful to free men, and will not seek a quarrel with you if you look competent, and might ask your aid in tracking down his quarry. He is skilled with a battle axe and shield. He carries some fermented whale meat that smells foul.

49 - Farina is a priest of nature who is an expert with bees. He has several hives that produce a remarkable honey that he claims provides healing properties. One hive, however, is failing, and he is worried. He will perform a ritual to aid your quest if you help him in some way or give you some honey.

50 - Myrtle is a determined fisherman with a child on her back. She is trying to dig a hole through some ice or reach a fishing spot. Her child is wailing and pointing at one of your items or weapons and asks you if her child can play with it. She has not named her child, as her tribe believes a child can only be named in their third year. She asks you for a name that she can consider if you aid her.

51 - Owlface has forgotten their name. They wear an owl mask and wields a sickle. They see themselves as a protector of birds. They do not speak, and if asked a question Owl will point or gesture in answer. They get angry if you speak of hurting birds, and stomp off if you consume one. Killing one will earn their ire. If it is an owl they will stalk you and attack when you are weakest.

52 - Shekhar is an expert midwife. She makes her way between different settlements, residing with different communities when her services are needed. She is gregarious and does not mind sharing her knowledge of the surroundings. She will give you a flower when you leave, which is very unlikely to have any real power, but may rot when a horror is near.

53 - Temir is a fisherman whose speciality is his fish jerky. He makes them by hanging them from windy cliffs. He's a seasoned climber who enjoys bathing in ice-cold rivers. He can protect himself but prefers to run away from fights. His preferred weapon is a hatchet that has been in his family for generations. He has a charm in the shape of a walrus that he says protects him from drowning.

54 - Bataar is a huge warrior who has placed himself in front of a bridge or valley. He refuses to let you through, but you can slip past him. He perceives this as a game. Should you try to use a weapon he will draw his heavily chipped battleaxe. He has other vices; possibly drink or good food, but it is unlikely he will let you pass uncontested.

54 - Sibila is a widow who worships fire. She bakes bread next to a volcano and is on her way to one now. She believes the God of Fire imbibes the bread with power and virility. She is suspicious of outsiders but will evangelise about her god, who she believes will consume the enemies of Ironlanders in a rain of fire. She shares some bread with you and it is indeed tasty.

55 - Nazmi is a trader who has lost part of his left hand to frostbite. He drags a wagon behind him filled with items of questionable worth, such as the paw of a bear and a piece of a rotted shed. He will recount his travels to the Wastes if asked. He tries to trade his junk with you. The item is highly unlikely to have any magical properties. If it does, it will be a one-off.

56 - Kuno is a young warrior who wields a war hammer. He is keen to spar with anyone, though if the combat goes well for him he will start trying to inflict actual harm. He is eager to learn and tries to act older and tougher than he is. He seeks advice on growing out a fine beard. He has a set of fine ivory beard trimming tools and an exquisite ear spoon.

57 - Amara is a newly arrived refugee, fleeing from the Selde. She has information about what their plans are, but will not give it up easily. She wants sanctuary and safety for her family. She is skilled with a knife, though the one she wields is chipped. She has scrimshaw from her uncle who carved them, telling of her tribe's battles with the Selde.

58 - Lestera is an alchemist and trader. She will grant you an elixir in exchange for something you own (-1 supply). Choose an effect as if you are consuming an elixir from the first selection on the alchemist path asset. You must Face Danger +iron and will gain the same benefits as the asset until the next night. Lestera is jubilant if the potion works, and blames it on you not being strong enough if it fails. She is highly unlikely to accompany you.

59 - Joa is a handsome dancer who is attempting to learn "the dance of the Gods". If you give him details of your exploits, he will dance to commemorate it so it will be marked in the annals of time. If you do, roll +edge. On a strong hit, you and each of your allies take +2 momentum and +1 spirit. On a weak hit, you take +1 momentum or +1 spirit, but your allies are unmoved. Joa does not expect any payment but asks that you tell no one about his presence. He has never cut his hair.

60 - Akiya is a devout warrior who wants to share the teachings of her God, the lord of the Mountains. She is on a pilgrimage to climb the highest peaks in the Ironlands, meditating on top of them to achieve wisdom and "to see the divine". She can give you some tips on climbing as long as you listen to her words. She does not attempt to convert you; just for you to listen and learn. She has plenty of dried rations and jerky. She will share them if you impress her, though she is not swayed by weapon mastery.

61 - Ravun, a weaver who is skilled with a staff, carries the head of his fallen brother in a sack. It is dried and mummified, and he claims it speaks to him on moonless nights and tells him the paths to avoid Death, which Ravun believes is an actual entity.

62 - Basira is a salt trader. She is accompanied by two guards who have sworn oaths of silence. Her salt is refined and has brought her great wealth. She will not mind her guards cooking for you or accompanying you on part of your journey. She has great plans to expand her business and might even want you to be part of them.

63 - You find a doll made of twigs about the size of your palm. You may try to track down who made them by using Wits or Shadow. Turn to 63a if you do.

64 - Pendry is a Forester who has named every tree in the woods where he dwells. He tells you about their moods and tempers. He is a good source of information but does not stay around for a fight. He taps some trees for their rich syrup and will share some with you.

65 - Jebran is a trader who tries to sell sculptures he has made from driftwood or fallen branches. The sculptures are often religious or from the sagas. He claims that the material he uses finds its form. He is an expert on the coastline or the deeper, unpopulated parts of the woods.

66 - Ghalen is a noble with four guards. He attempts to assert the rights of his title over you. He claims that he has heard of your settlement and by denying him courtesy you are insulting him. He asks for rations and other items on you that spark his curiosity. He talks to you as though you are of lower status. He is forging alliances for reasons he does not explain. He is also fond of trying rare meats, from walrus to cave lion. He hopes to try wyvern and mammoth one day.

67 - Servan has broken his bond and freely admits to murder. He believes that the man he killed is following him, wherever he goes. He avoids staying in any one area. He is skilled with a sword and confesses his crime to you. He might or might not be chased by a Revenant.

68 - Aleila is trying to lure her goat from the roof of her hut. She asks for your help in doing so. She gives you some goat milk or cheese if you manage to. The goat is black with a thick beard and looks at you judgmentally.

69 - Rhian is a warrior who barely acknowledges your presence. He talks little. His clothes are rags, and his sword is chipped. If you journey with him for more than half a day, you will notice something about him. Turn to 69a.

70 - Thrasan is a Mystic who believes everyone should confess their sins. He travels from settlement to settlement, sometimes accompanied by mercenaries or voluntary guards. He talks patiently and slowly, spending much of his time praying. He will refuse to give any advice unless you confess to your "sins against the Gods", whether truthful or not.

71 - Grumesh is a hunter; his favourite prey is marsh rat. He has a necklace of rat tails from the largest specimens he has caught. He is hunting a large one he calls "The Great Yellow Rat", which he describes as being as large as a horse. He believes he can enter the hall of the gods after slaying it.

72 - Kazan is a Wheelwright who is searching for the right type of material for the wheels he makes. He is accompanied by his daughter Tzin. She will ask you questions about where you're from and what you have seen. Kazan is wary but does not interfere. His craft is average but he is dependable. Tzin says a prayer she says she learned from spirits for every wheel her father completes.

73 - Blinken is a farmer who begs you for information about the other settlements you have been to. He offers his hovel to stay in, and it's surprisingly comfortable. He grows herbs in the forest that he harvests for pipeweed that he sells to supplement his income. Turn to 73a if you reside with him.

74 - Athelia is a farmer who lets her cattle graze around her settlement. In the evening, she sings or keens to them to lure them back to her home. You are likely to hear her singing, particularly in the evening. She is willing to share milk and cheese with you. Filial and dutiful, she is content to stay near her home but is always glad for the company. She asks questions about men and their wants.

75 - Gashon is ailing and knows he is dying after an encounter with a horror or wolves. Even if healed, he is unable to continue his purpose. He is delivering a weregild to the Gnarrsson family at a nearby settlement. It is payment for the death of the warrior Larion. He asks you to deliver the weregild on his behalf and stop the cycle of vengeance. Should you deliver the weregild, read entry 75a.

76 - Haagan loves to dive into cold rivers, believing this habit builds strength and health. He asks you to join him in his daily swims. This is a test of your Iron should you do so. If you impress him (strong hit), he will be impressed with you and if you spend two days with him he will impart to you his skills with the hammer. (-1 XP for a Thunderer asset upgrade)

77 - Miza studies stars and is an expert navigator. She carries maps and charts with her and can guide you to your objective. She believes some creatures hunt her for her knowledge, and she shows you the scars that they have left her. There is an even chance she is looking for a fallen meteor.

78 - Snal is a travelling trader and healer. He employs red leeches in his work, and he can help you recover from illnesses and poisons. He does not reveal where he harvests the leeches from. Should you spend more than a day with him or follow him stealthily after he has used his leeches, read 78a.

79 - Nakal believes he is not human. He believes he is a changeling left behind by a Firstborn. He does not stick to any settlement and moves around. He is an expert with the sling, using only stones that are plucked from rivers. If you spend time with him read 79a.

80 - Dhakan the strong believes the Silde are coming to the Ironlands and that all must prepare for the impending invasion. He goes to various settlements announcing that they must be ready, offering to train them in fighting. He always seeks to challenge the settlement's best warrior in single combat. He is extremely adept with a spear and offers an iron spearhead to whoever might defeat him in battle. If you are a warrior, he will size you up and challenge you formally in a duel to three strikes.

81 - Shani has been driven from her settlement for refusing to believe in the god the settlement follows. A baker, she abhors the priest that has become the de facto leader. She believes he is on the verge of getting his followers to launch a crusade that will end up in the death of nearly everyone. The only thing she has to trade is the information on an iron pillar. Should you help her overthrow the priest, she will give you information about the location of the pillar or information that can aid you with your vow. If you do so, read 81a.

82 - Tharn is dressed in ragged clothes. He offers you the only item he has; a wick that you can use to light a flame. He will ask for food or drink or another item he can trade for food or mead. He stinks of mead. He was once a warrior of some worth but has fallen on hard times. If you take the flame from him whether by force or theft, turn to 82a.

83 - Sharik and Dara are two fishermen who are battling for fishing rights in the upper regions of a body of water. They would like to enlist you to strike back against a couple of other poachers who have been encroaching on what they see as their territory. They prefer stealthy tactics rather than full-on combat, such as ruining others catch or destroying the fish or eel cages the other fishermen use. Both are impetuous and confident that they are in the right.

84 - Nazal looks drenched, as though he has been in the rain. He wields a stony-looking spear and speaks loudly. He is suspicious of you. If you befriend him or follow him, he will lead you to his lair. Read 84a. If you fight him he uses a thorny whip in battle.

85 - Yazila is carving symbols into trees or rocks. When asked, she explains that she is doing this to mark the way for other travellers. She is part of a group (some would call it a cult) leaving marks for other travellers. She may teach you about the markings. While you are unlikely to come upon them, if you do, they will give you an indication if a settlement is friendly, if a path is dangerous or where one might find sustenance or shelter.

86 - Serene is constructing a bridge between rivers or chasms. She seeks your assistance for a while as some of her other workers are injured. She promises you a good meal and conversation. She believes that the bridge will help her settlement with its trade links. "Build bridges, not forts." If you spend time earning her trust, read 86a.

87 - Myrn is an expert scrimshaw carver. She has several scrimshaws depicting scenes of hunting and from sagas. She can trade them for at least 2 of your supply. Some of the scrimshaws may aid you in finding information about a quest or vow, or aid in a ritual. If you do purchase them, you add +1 momentum. She is also hunting walruses and narwhals for ivory to carve, and may hire you to help hunt them. She has heard of a walrus as large as a mammoth, though she only half-believes it.

88 - Delkash is a forager and is carrying a six month old baby. He asks you for a name for his child. He does not believe in the Gods, only the spirit of the land, and in a dream, he was to ask wanderers he met for a name. He can alert you to foraging spots and is skilful with his spear. He speaks his mind and will answer any questions you have.

89 - Vashan has preferred to earn a living as a thief rather than honestly. He carries a black iron dagger and asks you to raid a tomb with him of an old tribal chief whose village no longer exists. He is an expert infiltrator and can teach you the skills of skulking and 'hiding your shadow'.

90 - Bazhin is a herder who collects feathers from birds. If you have a bird companion he will ask for a feather from them. He believes that once he has created a cloak of many feathers from different birds he will be able to fly. Someone has been taking his sheep and he has not been able to catch the culprit.

91 - Sendra carries a staff that she says comes from the First Tree. She is trying to plant it in an area of the Ironlands that will turn the land around it fertile. She is knowledgeable about matters related to plants and such but does not take them from the ground unless there is an immediate need.

92 - Abella is a merchant who is an expert carver of duck statuettes. She asks if you want to buy one. She finds ducks miraculous; after all, they can walk, dive and fly. She is an expert on birds and will help heal your avian companion if required. (Add +1 to roll)

93 - Dag is a warrior and an executioner. He carries a huge great axe that he uses for his executions. He has a faraway look, and he believes those he has killed follow him until he perishes. He eschews tales of battle for those of cunning or kindness. If you forge a bond with him, read 93a.

94 - The Kanvishers are a whole three-generation family migrating; there are about five adults and six children in all. (If it is winter or late autumn you find them settled into a temporary hovel or a cave). They have enough food and meat to share, though they require that you help them take care of the younger ones for a bit; a troublesome task. Should you try to fight them or steal from them and are discovered, the entire family will join in fighting you, including Granny Kanvisher, who wields a yew cane with ferocity.

95 - Matthias is a performer who mocks you the moment he spots you. He accompanies his insults by playing his flute. He is quick and evasive, and will run if you intend to draw blood. He will maintain his distance and continue to hurl insults. If you insult him back, he will begin a battle and you can test your wits. You don't need to beat him, but as long as you impress him, you earn his respect.

96 - You see a horse rushing towards you. You may attempt to stop it from trampling you or duck away. It will inflict two harm if you fail. The horse is followed by its owner, Rodrigus, who huffs and puffs. You can help him recapture his horse. If you do so, turn to 96a.

97 - Inka and Liyana are barley farmers who seem quite concerned. They are looking for someone to read a letter/missive they have received as they are illiterate. The missive is a plea from their son to send him funds. Inka does not want to but Liyana will. She may enlist your help and entrust you with some coin or goods if you are headed towards his son's residence.

98 - Ghint is a red-headed pilgrim heading in your direction. He has a bag of seal skulls and gull eggs. He is full of information about the Wastes. If you spend more than three days journeying with him, turn to 98a.

99 - Jaress is a merchant with braided hair. He sells dyes and concoctions that he claims improve one's hair and body. He is garrulous and chatty. If you forge a bond with him, he offers to braid your hair or beard, if you have either.

100 - Mortaes is a warrior who is heading to the Shattered Wastes to find a dragon. He is gruff and enjoys hearing stories about battle. He carries a sword that will help him kill dragons. He claims to be blessed with luck by the moon and plans to fight the dragon when the moon is full.

Should you share a journey with him, make a Shadow roll. On a weak hit or strong hit, refer to 100a.

Appendix A

1a. The sword is exceptional. It has magical properties against the Firstborn, or if your realm has no magic, adds a +1 to your combat roll for your first strike. It breaks on a missed double.

4a. The settlement resents Zura. He is not well-liked and despises all those who are too weak to take up arms.

6a. He is grateful and leads you to one of his traps. The bear trap was his and he stepped into it by mistake. You may increase your supply by 1 and he gives information about the surrounding territory.

12a. You blink and she disappears at the first ray of dawn into watery foam. You find a gift that will either aid you on a vow or you may increase your supply by 1.

14a. You come upon a trap left by Arakhi. Roll edge or take 2 harm on a miss and 1 harm on a weak hit. Arakhi then runs away as fast as he can. If you catch up with him he will climb a tree and refuse to move from it until you are gone.

21a. Her corpse falls to the ground and spiders break through her skin, scattering in the area around her.

26a. They turn hostile. One asks that you be on your way. If you threaten to report them further they attack.

32a. The Squirrel reports that your message has been delivered. You do not know if anything will come out of this though.

33a. The grove might be as she claims, but it is also growing plants with addictive yellowish berries.

42a - She is completing a ritual to bring her son's soul into the rock or tree. If you disrupt her ritual she sighs and will restart the ritual a week after.

63a - You follow the tracks made by the one who made the twigs and follow them to the house of Maura. He is elderly and is formidable with a spear. He is making the stick men and leaving them all over the place, believing that they will help protect him.

69A - You sense that Rhian is a Revenant. He has returned from the dead to wreak revenge upon those who left him for dead. He has slain one of them so far and is now looking for two others.

73a - He tries to drug you and then sacrifice you to the spirit in a lava pool nearby.

75a. The Gnarrsson are very likely to reject the payment. If you took more than three days, two of Larion's cousins are already on the way to hunt down Larion's killers.

78a. You see Snal consuming one of the leeches raw.

79a. Nakal reveals he is creating trouble for a settlement that has infringed on Firstborn land or a holy site. He asks you to aid him in his latest foray.

81a - You follow her instructions but you find nothing at the location. There doesn't even seem to be any sign of it at all.
If you return to confront her read 81b.

82a - The fire from the wick goes out. It seems the wick itself is not magical on its own. You make a Wits roll. If you succeed, read 82b.

84a - Nazal resides behind a waterfall. His belongings are few and are, expectedly, waterlogged. Some fools have tried to hunt him down believing he has a hidden source of iron, but he does not care for the metal. He will fight in water if he can, as he can hold his breath for long durations underwater, being a Waterborn.

86a - She confesses that the bridges are constantly being attacked by Hrar and his raiders. They are difficult to catch, and they strike at night. She feels she is being tested but she is resilient.

93a. Dag believes one of the men he executed recently was innocent. He has a tremendous feeling of guilt that is difficult to assuage.

95a - He is a useful source of information, particularly about the weak points of those in nearby settlements. He has been thrown out of everyone, though they welcome him back when there is a feast.

96a. Rodrigo gives you a trinket - a carving of a forgotten God. He says he is unworthy of it, which is the reason for his bad luck. You notice that he has not treated the horse well. It is underfed and bears the scars of his punishment.

98a. Ghint is a mystic who tries to take over your body. He is a formidable opponent and has a hefty punch. When he strikes you take +1 harm and +1 spirit. He laughs when he fights you.

99a - Jaress sings as he braids your hair. You feel stronger and more confident. You may gain +2 momentum.

100a. Mortaes carries a sack which contains the head of a creature that he claims is a troll. According to Mortaes, the head gives him guidance on traversing the waste and deciding his fate.

Appendix B

41b - There is an old short troll here, and it does enjoy the joke and might give a boon to you and Jahan.

81b - When confronted, Shani says she had to do what she could to prevent the leader from destroying her settlement. She asks for mercy but will flee. At most she is a troublesome but wily foe, using the terrain to her advantage.

82b - You believe Tharn is a light bearer, and the wick is the manifestation of his power.
